

COUNCIL ASKED TO
AID IN ABOLISHING
DEADLY CROSSING

Last Monday evening a regular meeting of the City Council was held, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

The City Council of Palo Alto sent a communication to the Council, mentioning the recent deplorable collision between a railroad train and an automobile, which destroyed the lives of four citizens of Palo Alto. The Palo Alto City Council is taking steps to prevent, if possible, such accidents in the future. On October 16 there will be a meeting in the Community Center house in Palo Alto, to discuss plans for the elimination of all grade crossings on the Peninsula, and it was requested that a representative from Daly City be present.

The Council received a communication from the League of California Municipalities, advising that a move is on foot to organize a Municipal Waterworks Association, which will be affiliated with the League. An invitation was extended to the City Council to send a representative to the meeting to be held in Oakland, October 7 to 11. The object of the meeting is the discussion of subjects of common interest in relation to the operation of public utilities, with a view to improving same.

A communication was received from T. C. Rice, recorder of San Mateo county, explaining the change of map laws by the recent legislature, making it a misdemeanor to sell any subdivision or portion thereof by reference to any map other than a recorded map.

A communication was received from the San Bruno Volunteer Fire Department, addressed to Chief Kennedy, extending thanks to the Daly City Fire Department for their splendid cooperation in making the San Bruno celebration of September 9 a success.

A letter was received from W. G. Harsey, asking the replacement of a street light on the corner of Frankfort and Acton streets. He also said that there is a great deal of sand shifting across Acton street where the Pacific Gas and Electric Company laid their gas main, making it almost impassable for a car. This matter was referred to the water and light committee.

The monthly bills were read and ordered paid.

The meeting adjourned out of respect to the late County Auditor, John J. Shields.

JUDGE EXERCISES
WISDOM OF SOLOMON

Some American judges are famous for their keen perception and sense of wit.

Judge Ellis C. Johnson of Daly City is certainly entitled to be included in this category.

An Italian was brought before his honor by the Deputy State Warden for an infraction of the game laws in shooting cottontail rabbits out of season.

The evidence presented was conclusive, as the defendant was found in possession of the rabbit immediately after the shot.

The judge, familiar with the great American judicial principle of equality of all before the law, asked the defendant what he had to say in self defense, and listened to the following:

"Well, Judge, you know I go into the wood to kill an owl that stole my chickens and see the owl up a tree. I shoota that owl and down coma da rabbit, and when I picka him up this man arresti me."

The judge adjusted his spectacles, dug deep into his mental chamber for a ray of Solomonian wisdom, and replied:

"I believe your story, but the phenomena was so extraordinary that the experience was worth $25 of any man's money." And the amount was assessed accordingly.

The blindfolded figure emblematic of blind justice had in this case the bandage removed and was made to see, and it did not occur in Scotland, either.

MEETS DEATH WHILE AT WORK

Leandro Bondoni, 35 years of age, who made his home with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Francesconi, of Brunswick street, lost his life last Monday when the wall of a pit in which he was working preparatory to the construction of a retaining wall, at 23 Hawthorne street, caved in on him. Despite rescue efforts by employees of the Johnson & Johnson wholesale medicinal supply house at 645 Howard street, it was more than an hour before the sand and debris could be removed from the body. Funeral services for Mr. Bondoni were held in San Francisco last Thursday morning, with a requiem mass for the repose of his soul at St. Peter's and Paul's church.

BAYSHORE ROAD
OPENING OCT. 20

It has been decided that a celebration of the opening of the San Francisco link of the Bayshore boulevard will be held on Sunday, October 20.

Ira H. Potter, president of the South San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, was named chairman of San Mateo county's Bayshore highway celebration committee at a joint meeting of the San Mateo and San Francisco counties' executive committees, held in San Francisco last Wednesday.

The committees discussed methods of handling traffic on the opening day of the San Francisco link of the Bayshore boulevard. It was definitely decided that the fete should take place at the county line at Bayshore. It was also decided that the event be staged on October 20.

Supervisors Rosalie M. Brown of San Mateo, and Thomas L. Hickey, of South San Francisco, attended the conference. San Mateo county's committee is composed of the presidents of the seven chambers of commerce in the county. This group will hold a meeting of its own some time next week.

George Williams, president of the Burlingame Chamber of Commerce and a member of the committee, declared that he plans to have one of the regular luncheon meetings of the chamber devoted entirely to discussion of the forthcoming celebration.

Governor C. C. Young has promised to attend the affair.

Emphasis was put on the fact that the program should be as brief as possible. The delegations from San Francisco and from San Mateo county will meet at the county line, where the event will take place. The San Mateo county officials and others plan to lead the San Francisco crowd on down the peninsula after the ceremony. All cities and towns on the peninsula will be asked to co-operate by decorating the streets. There will be several bands participating in the affair.

CROCKER P. T. A. HOLDS
AN ENTERTAINING MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Crocker Parent-Teachers' Association was held in Company No. 5 fire house, on Bellevue avenue, last Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was an enthusiastic one and was well attended. The class having the largest attendance of mothers for this meeting and October will be given an all day tour of San Francisco on the school car, through the courtesy of the Market Street Railway Company. Miss Johnson's class is ahead so far.

Plans were discussed to further athletic activities, and committees were appointed to investigate the possibilities.

Three new members were received into the association, Mrs. M. Steele, Mrs. Cook and Mrs. C. Vernengo.

Mrs. Owens, of the Seventeenth district, gave a short parliamentary drill, which was instructive as well as interesting. This was followed by a short talk on the possibilities of a study circle. Mrs. Owen has a delightful way of holding her listeners and saying much in a few words. Her remarks were well received, and Mrs. Pauw, the study circle chairman, promises some very interesting afternoons for those who wish to join and help to make us better mothers and homemakers.

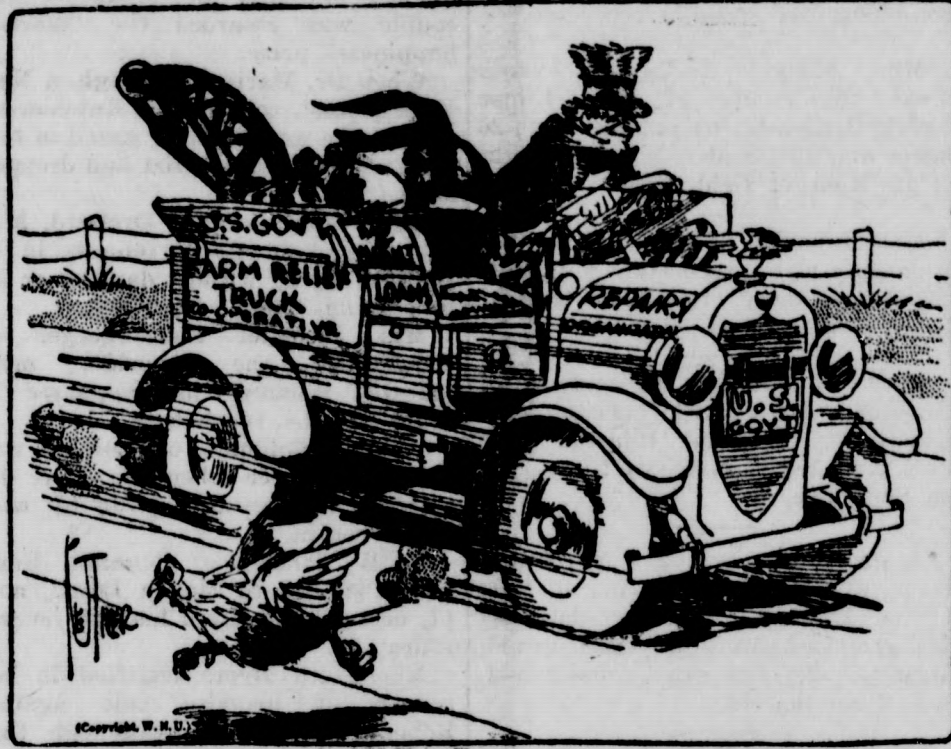

A report of the district meeting held in Pescadero on Friday of last week was read by the president, Mrs. Ivy Alexander, after which the meeting adjourned to partake of tasty home made cake and coffee served by Mesdames Dorn, McCarthy, Millhauser and McDermott. During the festive moments around the table, Mrs. Ethel Bolger, hospitality chairman, read a report from the Seventeenth district hospitality meeting held at the home of Mrs. Stone last Monday. She reports some new ideas and also she is to be hostess at the next district meeting in San Mateo, October 18.

Every one felt that their time was well spent, and are looking forward to the next meeting in October. Let's all plan to be there.

"GHOST CAR" WILL CURB
HILLSBOROUGH SPEEDERS

Hillsborough will be the only city in central San Mateo county to have a "ghost car" for capturing speeders, under the newly amended state statute. The Hillsborough police car has been given a coat of white paint, while official cars in San Mateo and Burlingame remain the prevailing color. The reason is that Hillsborough has no ordinances under which to apprehend speeders and is subject to the "distinctive color" clause in the amendment. San Mateo and Burlingame may apprehend speeders under city laws not affected by the new state statute.

RANDALL PITCHES
TWO HIT CONTEST

Assisted by Maloney's heavy hitting, Dick Randall, Daly City Merchants' chucker, turned back the Darcy's Sport Shop nine last Sunday at San Mateo, by a score of 5 to 3, allowing only two hits.

The game was closely contested throughout. During the first three innings Randall allowed only two men to reach first base, while Angelo, the opposing pitcher, was having very little trouble disposing of the Merchants batsmen.

The boys from Daly City scored three runs in the fourth inning. Cruchoff started the rally with a single; Kean followed suit, and they both crossed the plate when Maloney clouted a long triple that landed in a tree in right field. He scored a little later on Hawley's hit.

The Darcy's team put across two runs in their half of the fourth stanza. Randall walked the first two men to face him in this frame. They completed the circuit after Dick made a wild pitch and the next two men hit sacrifice flies.

In the fifth the San Mateoans tied the score. Cherry, the first man up, was issued a base on balls, stole second and went to third when Strand threw the ball away in an attempt to make a put-out at the keystone sack. B. Pease sacrificed him across the platter.

The Merchants forged ahead again in the sixth inning, and maintained this lead until the end of the game. They coupled three hits, a walk and an error together to score two runs.

These teams have arranged a return game that will be played in San Mateo next Sunday. The contest will start at 2:30 o'clock.

CHINESE MINSTRELS WILL BE AT CALVARY MISSION

Sunday, September 29, promises to be a great day at Calvary Mission. A fine program has been arranged for the morning service, and in the evening thirty-five Chinese boys from Chang Mei Home, Berkeley, together with a group of girls from the Wah Mei Glee Club, will entertain with their songs and music.

Calvary Mission is fortunate in securing Dr. Shepherd and his fine group of talent.

The boys will give an exhibition of what to expect when they give their operetta "Nancy Lee," Friday, October 4, at the Golden Gate Y. M. C. A. Calvary Mission is sponsoring this play, and all proceeds will go to the Mission building fund.

Rally day went over the top with 136 present. This is the record attendance in the history of the Mission.

The congregation has voted to enter the Loyalty Crusade, and are expecting great results from the movement. A. C. MINTZ, Pastor.

INDIANS-DAMON
PLAY 6 TO 6 TIE

Showing more strength than was expected of them, especially against their heavy, experienced opponents, Jefferson's football team held Damon high to a 6 to 6 tie last Friday on the Indians' gridiron.

The Warriors, with the exception of the left side of the line on defense, turned in a fairly well balanced game. The backfield played exceptionally well, in fact they showed a hundred per cent improvement over the other contests. SoRelle, fullback, scored Jefferson's points in the second quarter when he ran 35 yards on a weak-side play.

Although the Jefferson gridders fought hard during most of the game, they were unable to rid themselves of the third quarter let-down that has been noticeable in every contest. In this period Damon marched from mid-field to place the ball on the 2 yard line. From this point Dunn, fullback, scored on the second play in the fourth quarter.

Inexperience cost the Indians a chance to score the winning touchdown in the fourth quarter. They took possession of the pigskin on their 30 yard marker and advanced it to the 5 yard line before the final whistle blew. Had they not taken so much time between the last two plays they might have crossed the goal line again, as they wasted precious seconds in the huddle.

B. Y. P. U. WORKING TOGETHER

Did you ever see two calves tied together trying to drink from two buckets by first pulling against each other, then working together, both drinking first from one bucket and then from the other? It is one of the funniest things you can imagine.

The same is true of young people who work against each other rather than together. It ends up with a riot and is a big joke throughout.

The Young People of the Calvary Baptist Mission this Sunday evening at 6:45 will discuss "How Can Young People Work Together in the Church?" Besides the topic there will be musical numbers as well as vocal, which you will want to hear. Young People, welcome! The street number is 5724 Mission street, just below Oliver.

FORMER OFFICIAL
CLEARED BY JURY

A jury of seven women and five men found Miss Nettie Willits, for twelve years city clerk of San Bruno, not guilty of six separate charges of embezzlement and one of misappropriation of San Bruno tax receipts amounting to $2,739, in Superior Judge George H. Buck's court at Redwood City last Wednesday. The jury was out but half an hour.

Separate verdicts of not guilty were affixed to each count, with the signature of the foreman of the jury. The first four counts charged specific embezzlement of $45.39, $31.35, $25.90 and $45; the fifth with embezzlement of $1,366.10; the sixth of $2,739, and the seventh with failing to turn over to the San Bruno city treasurer the sum of $2,739.

Miss Willits' trial was begun Monday morning, and ended Wednesday evening when the jury returned with a verdict.

Miss Willits was city clerk of San Bruno for twelve years. She pleaded guilty to the charges on her previous appearance in court and was given probation for two years. San Bruno officials objected to Judge George H. Buck granting her probation. On their protest, Judge Buck reopened the case, set aside the plea of guilty and the sentence, and ordered the new trial.

Miss Willits received the news that she had been freed of the charges in tears, and, jubilant at her acquittal, immediately rushed over to shake the hands of the members of the jury. Judge Buck commended the jurors for reaching a verdict so quickly.

SOUTH CITY URGES
WATER DISTRICT

South San Francisco business leaders have gone on record favoring formation of a county water district following a meeting at which the Peninsula's decreasing supply was explained by M. J. Bartell, hydraulic engineer, and Edward Harrison, Redwood City chairman of the county district committee.

A county-wide distribution system to link up with the completed Hetch Hetchy system must be installed and will pay for itself in reduced water costs as against pumping from wells, Bartell told the South San Francisco committee.

Attorney John W. Coleberd, chairman of the committee, City Councilman Andrew Hynding, and Ambrose McSweeney, county tax collector, were among those who endorsed the project.

MERIT BADGES AWARDED
BOY SCOUTS OF COUNTY

One hundred merit badges covering various subjects in Scoutcraft were awarded to twenty-five Scouts at special exercises held Tuesday at the city hall in San Mateo. The court of honor has made an enviable record in the past nine months, according to the statement filed with the national court of honor board by E. A. Barrer, secretary of the court. During the first nine months of 1929 over 1100 badges were awarded and ten Scouts qualified as Eagle Scouts, the highest rank in Scoutdom.

Greater strides will be made during the balance of the year in order to capture the honored place in merit badge work in the United States.

THE EAGLES NEST

The regular meeting of the Eagles was held on Thursday evening of last week, a good crowd being present.

A minute of silence was held out of respect for the memory of Brother Heinrich, who recently passed away.

Brother Kennedy was presented with a diamond studded pen for his tireless efforts in promoting the last initiation class.

The booster committee announced a membership drive to end on October 24. Brothers Merritt and Ottoboni are making it a contest to see which has the larger number of candidates for the initiation.

The booster committee also recommended a big night for October 31, at the Halloween party: Set that date down now.

On Tuesday evening the Associated Aeries of San Mateo county met in South San Francisco. Sixteen Daly City members attended. The constitution and by-laws were adopted, and the association, under the presidency of Brother Bolger, of Daly City, immediately took up a program that means a bigger and better Eagledom for the county. Redwood City had twenty members present. San Mateo was represented by fifteen; South San Francisco had forty. After the business meeting a repast was served and enjoyed by all.

WESTERN PACIFIC
IS FIGHTING FOR A
PENINSULA LINE

The Western Pacific Railroad Company announced Monday that final steps had been taken to obtain the authorization from the Interstate Commerce Commission to enable the Western Pacific to carry out its plan to effect an all-rail entrance to San Francisco by the construction of a line of railroad by its subsidiary, the Western Pacific California Railroad Company, between San Francisco and Niles, via Redwood City. The proposed line will cross the southerly end of San Francisco bay and connect with the main line of the Western Pacific.

The announcement stated that the Western Pacific California Railroad Company had forwarded an application to the Interstate Commerce Commission for an order reopening the proceeding in connection with the original application for a permit to construct the initial unit of the connecting railroad, namely, the section between San Francisco and Redwood City, in order that this application be amended to include the construction of the second and final unit between Redwood City and Niles, and that a hearing be held upon the project as an entirety.

The amended application, which has also been forwarded to the Interstate Commerce Commission, provides for the construction of 25 miles of railroad commencing at the Western Pacific terminals in San Francisco and extending in a southerly and south-easterly direction through the counties of San Francisco and San Mateo to Redwood City and thence to a point at or near the plant of the Pacific Portland Cement Company in San Mateo county; also for the construction of 14 miles of railroad commencing at a point on the San Francisco-Redwood City line at or near Redwood City and extending in a general easterly and northeasterly direction in San Mateo and Alameda counties to a connection with the main line of the Western Pacific at or near Niles.

The Western Pacific, which has determined that it is now practicable and desirable to construct both units of the connecting line, states that it will proceed to construct the new railroad upon authorization by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Reasons why the present and future public convenience and necessity require the construction of the proposed connecting railroad between San Francisco and Niles are stated by the Western Pacific California Railroad Company as follows:

"1. It will immediately provide the Western Pacific with a through all-rail line into San Francisco via Niles and Redwood City, thereby being of great benefit to San Francisco and other territory to be traversed, and also to the Western Pacific by reason of the traffic and other advantages that will result therefrom. It will create a new and competitive all-rail route to and from San Francisco and the cities of the Peninsula. It will remove the handicap to the expansion of the transportation facilities of these cities and territory to be served, and consequently to their development, which has existed for many years due to the fact that access to San Francisco by land is monopolized by the Southern Pacific.

"By comparison with other large cities of the West which have the complete services of two or more railroads, San Francisco is at a distinct disadvantage. Its rail facilities are by no means commensurate with its position as a great seaport and trade center of the West, and with the growing demands for the transportation of inbound and outbound traffic.

"As long as all-rail entry to San Francisco is controlled by a single carrier, San Francisco may be said to be served by only one railroad in the full sense of the word. On account of the nearness of its main line to the San Francisco Peninsula, the Western Pacific affords the most feasible means by which this situation may be remedied, and this will be accomplished if its proposed connecting line between San Francisco and Niles is permitted to be constructed.

"2. The plans of the Great Northern Railway for making a connection with the Western Pacific in Northern California, which are involved in the Great Northern-Western Pacific project now before the Interstate Commerce Commission, add very much to the necessity for the construction of the new line between San Francisco and Niles and will greatly enhance its value to the community to be served and to the Western Pacific.

"3. The new line will serve a section of the city and county of San Francisco and a section of San Mateo county, including the waterfront of San Francisco Bay from Islais Creek to Redwood City. The section to be served has long been in need of direct railroad transportation service to afford opportunity for industrial development which is greatly needed and which will be of material advantage to the territory to be served.

"4. It will also connect the Western Pacific with South San Francisco, an industrial district already well developed, and will include a connection with the South San Francisco Belt Railway, which serves the Union Stock Yards and packing houses in that territory.

"5. The cities of San Mateo county, including South San Francisco, San Bruno, Burlingame, San Mateo, San Carlos, Belmont, and Redwood City, will benefit not only from the industrial development of the Peninsula, but will also gain by being served by a second and competing transcontinental railroad.

"6. The proposed line will also afford rail service to a portion of Alameda county to be traversed thereby, much of which is an exceedingly valuable fruit and vegetable section.

"7. The proposed line is a logical and necessary extension of the transportation facilities of the Western Pacific. The Western Pacific represents an investment of considerable magnitude. If this investment is to be conserved and if the Western Pacific is to function as an independent, self-sustaining and competing carrier, it must be given opportunity to round out its system so as to give maximum service to the territory which it serves.

"8. Construction of the new line will give impetus to the growth of the San Francisco Bay district, bringing new business, new industries, and increased population, with the result that all transportation interests affected will share in increased prosperity. That the Pacific Coast is at this time experiencing marked growth in practically all lines of business is shown by various indices, among these being the reports for the first seven months of 1929 made to the Interstate Commerce Commission by the railroads serving this territory, all of which show large increases in gross earnings. All indications point to a rapid development which demands additional transportation facilities in the San Francisco Bay district."

Arizona still insists on spelling it "Boulder Dam."

"You must not think I would have been guilty of that," he said quietly. "I've played a part I never thought to play; I've done a thing I never thought to have done. I'm sorry and ashamed for it. But I tell you, Athol—that's all. As God's my witness, I've done you no wrong. Surely you don't think me as low as that? I did what I did for my very love for you, for your honor's sake. I asked her here that you might see what she was—but that's all, I swear it. She's been as safe as if in a cage of steel."

"I know it," I said. "I know it. You don't need to tell me that. You brought her here to expose her, to show me what a fool I was. It didn't matter how much it hurt me, the more the better, anything to save the name. You would have broken my heart, sacrificed me on the altar of your accursed pride. Oh, I can see plainly now! There's a thousand years of prejudice and bigotry concentrated in you. Thank God, I have a human heart!"

"I thought I was acting for the best!" he cried.

"I know it—according to your lights. You asked her here that I might see what she was. You tell me you have gained her love; you say she came here at your bidding; you swear she would have been faithful to me. Well, I tell you, brother of mine, in your teeth I tell you—I don't believe you!"

Suddenly the little, drooping figure on the chair had raised itself; the white, woe-begone face with the wide, staring eyes was turned toward me; the pitiful look had gone, and in its stead was one of wild, unspeakable joy.

"It's all right, Berna," I said; "I don't believe him, and if a million others were to say the same, if they were to thunder it in my ears down all eternity, I would tell them they lied, they lied!"

A heaven-lit radiance was in the gray eyes. She made as if to come to me, but she swayed, and I caught her in my arms.

"Don't be frightened, little girl. Give me your hand. See! I'll kiss it, dear. Now, don't cry; don't hush."

Her arms were around me. She clung to me ever so tightly. "Garry," I said, "this is my wife. When I have lost my belief in all else, I will believe in her. You have made us both suffer. As for what you've said—you're mistaken. She's a good, good girl. I will not believe that by thought, word or deed she has been untrue to me. She will explain everything. Now, good-by. Come, Berna."

Suddenly she stopped me. Her hand was on my arm, and she turned toward Garry. She held herself as proudly as a queen.

"I want to explain now," she said, "before you both."

She pulled from her bosom a little crumpled note, and handed it to me. Then, as I read it, a great light burst on me. Here it was:

"Dear Berna:

"For heaven's sake be on your guard. Jack Locasto is on his way north again. I think he's crazy. I know he'll stick at nothing, and I don't want to see blood spilt. For your sake, and for the sake of one dear to you, be warned."

"In haste,
"Viola Lenoir."

"I got it two days ago," she said. "Oh, I've been distracted with fear. I did not like to show it to you. I've brought you nothing but trouble, and I've never spoken of him, never once. You understand, don't you?"

"Yes, little girl, I understand."

"I wanted to save you, no matter at what cost. Tonight I tried to prevent you going out there, for I feared you might meet him. I knew he was very near. Then, when you had gone, my fear grew and grew. There I sat, thinking over everything. Oh, if I only had a friend, I thought; some one to help me. Then, as I sat, dazed, distracted, the phone rang. It was your brother."

"Yes, go on, dear."

"He told me he wanted to see me; he begged me to come at once. I thought of you, of your danger, of some terrible mishap. I was terrified. I went."

She paused a moment, as if the recital was infinitely painful to her, then she went on.

"I found my way to his room. My mind was full of you, of that man, of how to save you. I did not think of my self, of my position. At first I was too agitated to speak. He bade me sit down, compose myself. His manner was quiet, grave. Again I feared for you. He asked me to excuse him for a moment, and left the room. He seemed to be gone an age, while I sat there, trying to fight down my terror. The suspense was killing me. Then he came back. He closed and locked the door. All at once I heard a step outside, a knock. 'Hush! go in there,' he said. He opened the door. I heard him speaking to some one. I waited, then you burst in on me. You know the rest."

"Yes, yes."

"As for your brother, I've tried, oh, so hard, to be nice to him for your sake. I liked him; I wanted to be to him as a sister, but never an unfaithful thought has entered my head, never a wrong feeling sullied my heart. I've been true to you."

"Oh, my dear, my dear!"

"I want to bring you happiness, but I only bring you trouble, sorrow. Sometimes, for your sake, I wish we had never met."

She turned to Garry.

"As for you, you've done me a great wrong. I can never forget it. Will you go now, and leave us in peace?"

His head was bent, so that I could not see his face.

"Can you not forgive?" he groaned. She shook her head sadly. "No, I am afraid I can never forgive."

"Can I do nothing to atone?"

"No, I'm afraid your punishment must be—that you can do nothing."

He said never a word. She turned to me:

"Come, my husband, we will go."

I was opening the door to leave him forever. Suddenly I heard a step coming up the stairs, a heavy, hurried tread. I looked down a moment, then I pushed her back into the room.

"Be prepared, Berna," I said quietly; "here comes Locasto."

There we waited, Garry and I, and beside us Berna. We heard that heavy tread come up, up the creaking stairway, stumble a moment, then pause on the landing. There was something ominous, something pregnant in that pause. The steps halted, wavered a little, then, inflexible as doom, on they came toward us. The next instant the door was thrown open, and Locasto stood in the entrance.

Even in that brief moment I was struck by the change in him. He seemed to have aged by twenty years. He limped, and I noticed his left hand was gloved.

From under his bristling brows he glared at us. As he swayed there he minded me of an evil beast, a savage creature, a mad, desperate thing. With a malignant laugh, the sneering laugh of a fiend, he stepped into the room.

"So! Seems as if I'd lighted on a pretty nest of love-birds. Ho! ho! my sweet! You're not satisfied with one lover, you must have two. Well, you are going to be satisfied with one from now on, and that's Jack Locasto. I've stood enough from you, you white-faced jade. You've haunted me, you've put some kind of a spell on me. You've ured me back to this land, and now I'm going to have you or die! Stand out, away from those two. Stand out, I say! March out of that door."

She only shrank back the farther.

"You won't come, curse you; you won't come, you milk-faced witch, with your great eyes that bore holes in me, that turn my heart to fire, that make me mad. You won't come. Stand back there, you two, and let the girl come."

We shielded her.

"Ha! You won't let me get her. Well, I'll be all the worse for her. I'll make her life a hell. I'll beat her. You won't stand back, you the dark one—don't I know you; haven't I hated you more than the devil hates a saint; hated you worse than bitter poison? These three black years you've barked me, you've kept her from me. Oh, I've lashed to kill you times without number, and I've spared you. But now it's my call. Stand back there, stand back I say. Your time's come. Here's where I shoot."

His hand leapt up and I saw it gripped a revolver. He had me covered. His face was contorted with devilish triumph, and I knew he meant to kill. At last, at last my time had come. I saw his fingers twitching on the trigger. I gazed into the hollow horror of that barrel. My heart turned to ice. I could not breathe. Oh, for a respite, a moment—Ugh! . . . he pulled the trigger, and, at the same instant, Garry sprang at him!

What had happened? The shot rang in my ears. I was still standing there. I felt no wound. I felt no pain. Then, as I stared at my enemy, I heard a heavy fall. Ah, God! there at my feet lay Garry, lay in a huddled, quivering heap, lay on his face, and in his fair hair I saw a dark stain start and spread. Then, in a moment, I realized what my brother had done.

I fell on my knees beside him. "Garry, Garry!" I moaned. I heard Berna scream, and I saw that Locasto was coming for me. He was a man no longer. He had killed. He was a brute, a fury, a devil, mad with the lust of slaughter. With a snarl he dashed at me. Again I thought he was going to shoot, but no! He raised the heavy revolver and brought it crushing down on my head. I felt the blow fall, and with it my strength seemed to shoot out of me. My legs were paralyzed. I could not move. And, as I lay there in a misty daze, he advanced on Berna.

His hands were stretched out to clutch her; a moment more and he would have her in his arms, a moment—ah! With a suddenness that was like a flash she had raised the heavy reading lamp and dashed it in his face.

I heard his shriek of fear; I saw him fall as the thing crashed between his eyes; I saw the flames spurt and leap. High in the air he rose, awful in his agony. He was in a shroud of fire; he was in a pool of flame. He howled like a dog and fell over on the bed.

Then suddenly the oil-soaked bedding caught. The curtains seemed to leap and change into flame. As he rolled and roared in his agony, the blaze ran up the walls, and caught the roof. Help, help! the room was afire, was burning up. Fire! Fire!

Out in the corridor I heard a great running about, shouting of men, screaming of women. The whole place seemed to be alive, panic-stricken, frenzied with fear. Everything was in flames now, burning fiercely, madly, and there was no stopping them. The hotel was burning, and I, too, must burn. What a horrible end!

"So! Seems as if I'd lighted on a Pretty Nest of Love-Birds."

Oh, if I could only do something! But I could not move. From the waist down I was like a dead man. Where was Berna? Pray God she was safe. I could not cry for aid. The room was reeling round and round. I was faint, dizzy, helpless.

Some one was trying to save me, was dragging my body across the floor. Consciousness left me, and it seemed for ages I lay in a stupor. When I opened my eyes again some one was still tugging at me. We were going down the stairway, and on all sides of us were sheets of flapping flame. I was wrapped in a blanket. How had it got there? Who was that dark figure pulling at me so desperately, trying to lift me, staggering a few paces with me, stumbling blindly on? Brave one, noble one, whoever you be! Fool-hardy one, reckless one, whoever you be! Save yourself while yet there is time. Leave me to my fate. But, oh, the agony of it to burn, to burn!

Another desperate effort and we are almost at the door. Oh, my rescuer, a last frenzied effort! We are almost at the door. Then I am lifted up and we both tumble out into the street. Not a second too soon, for, like a savage beast foiled of its prey, a blast of flame shoots after us, and the doorway is a gulf of blazing wrath.

I am lying in the snow, lying on a blanket, and some one holds my head.

"Berna," is that you?

She nods. She does not speak. I shudder as I look at her. Her face is like a great burn, a black mask in which her eyes and teeth gleam white.

"Oh, Berna, Berna, and it was you that dragged me out . . .!"

My eyes go to the fiery hell in front. As I look the roof crashes in and we are showered by falling sparks. I see the line of a black girder leap out, and hanging over it a limp, charred shape. A moment it hangs uncertainly, then plunges downward into the roasting heart of the pit. And I know it for Locasto.

Oh, Berna, Berna. I can't bear to look at her. Why did she do it? It's pitiful, pitiful.

The fire is spreading. Right and left it swings and leaps in giant strides. All is pandemonium now. Mad with fear and excitement, men and women rave and curse and pray. Water! water! is the cry; but no water comes. Suddenly a mob of terror-stricken men comes surging down the street. They bring the long hose line that connects with the pump-station on the river. Water, water is coming.

The line is laid and a cry goes up to turn on the water. Hurry there! But no water comes. What can be the matter? Then the dread whisper goes round that the man in charge of the pumping station has neglected his duty, and the engine fires are cold.

A howl of fury and despair goes up to the lurid heavens. Women wring their hands and moan; men stand by in a stupor of hopeless agony. And the fire, as if it knew of its victory, leaps up in a roaring ecstasy of triumph.

There is no hope. The gold-born city is doomed. From where I lie the scene is one long vista of blazing gables, ribs and rafters hugged by tawny arms of fire. Squat cabins swirling in mad eddies of flame; hotels, dance halls, brothels swathed and smothered in flame-vent blankets of swirling smoke. There is no hope. The fire is a vast avenger, and before its wrath the iniquity of the tenderloin is swept away.

The gold-born city is doomed. Yet, as I lay there, it seemed to me like a judgment, and that from its ruins would arise a new city, clean, upright, incorruptible—a great city, proud and prosperous, beloved of hating hearts, and blessed in its purity and peace.

"Beloved," I sighed through a gathering mist of consciousness. I felt some hot tears falling on my face. I felt a kiss seal my lips. I felt a breathing in my ear.

"Oh, my dear, my dear!" she said. "I've only brought you sorrow and pain, but you've brought me love, that love that is a dazzling light, beside which the sunshine is as darkness."

"Berna!" I raised myself; I put out my arms to clasp her. They clasped the empty air. Wildly, wildly I looked around. She was gone!

"Berna!" Again I cried, but there was no reply. I was alone, alone. Then a great weakness came over me.

I never saw her again.

THE LAST

It is finished. I have written here the story of my life, or of that portion of it which means everything to me, for the rest means nothing. Now that it is done, I too have done, so I sit me down and wait. For what am I waiting? A divine miracle perhaps.

Somehow I feel I will see her again, somehow, somewhere. Surely God would not reveal to us the shining light of the Great Reality only to plunge us again into outer darkness? Love cannot be in vain. I will not believe it. Somehow, somewhere!

So in the glow of the great peat fire I sit me down and wait, and the faith grows in me that she will come to me again; that I will feel the soft caress of her hand upon my pillow, that I will hear her voice all tuned to tenderness, that I will see through my tear-blinded eyes her sweet compassionate face. Somehow, somewhere!

I am waiting, waiting. I close my eyes and wait. I know she will come.

Ah, Berna, my dear, my dear! I knew you would return; I knew, I knew. Come to me, little one. I'm tired, so tired. Put your arms around me, girl; kiss me, kiss me. I'm weak and ill, but now you've come I'll soon be well again. You won't leave me any more; will you, honey? Oh, it's good to have you once again! It seems like a dream. Kiss me once more, sweetheart. It's all so cold and dark. Put your arms around me. . . .

Oh, Berna, Berna, light of my life. I knew all would come right at last—beyond the mists, beyond the dreaming; at last, dear love, at last! . . .

Child Behavior Merely Reflection of Parents'

There is no mystery about children. They are puzzling, often, but they are never incomprehensible. At least, they are not incomprehensible to old folks and I think they need not be to parents.

Fathers and mothers are themselves the keys to their offspring. A disorderly father should be able to understand why his image will not put away his toys. A quick-tempered mother should not have to call a doctor for her daughter's tantrums; he can only advise self-control—in the mother.

The mystery is about parents, young parents, busy with their own affairs, too preoccupied with their future to think of the present of their children

Geographical

Point Pelee, Ontario, is the most southerly point on the mainland of Canada. The farthest point south in Canada, however, is Pelee Island and the adjacent Middle Island in Lake Erie. This point is in the same latitude as northern California and is more than 500 miles farther south than the most northerly point in the United States.

and to recall how it was with them when they were young.

"Run away, now, and play. Papa is reading his newspaper."

Parents say that, not grandparents. Grandparents do not consider the news so important as parents do. Grandpa has time and memories, some self-knowledge, some sense of proportion. —Lincoln Steffens in the North American Review.

Some Are

Probably it is because courts try so hard to be dignified that even little slips sound so terribly funny. In Judge Sheldon's court, not so very long ago, the jury came in to report a verdict after two hours of argument.

"Have you come to a decision?" asked his honor.

"Yes, sir," replied the foreman. "The jury is of one mind—temporarily insane." —Los Angeles Times.

One of the earliest systems whereby the blind might read originated in Peru, where the alphabet was formed by knots on a length of string.

Newest Dress Fabrics

Composition of Metal

Flexible fabrics containing layers of metallic foil have been perfected by German manufacturers, and women soon may go to dances and the opera in stunning evening gowns of metal, while their escorts will be clad in a modern adaptation of the suits of armor worn by knights of old, says the San Francisco Chronicle.

The new "cloth" is made of thin sheets of aluminum, resembling tin foil or gold foil, and coated on both sides with protective material not unlike the plastic substances used in manufacturing rayon. This fabric is said to be almost as light as silk, tough as leather, waterproof as leather and bright and heat-reflecting as aluminum. Of this material raincoats, umbrellas, and even dresses and business suits may be made. Not only striking frocks for women, but also beautiful effects in household decorations will be obtainable in the new fabrics, according to the makers.

Corn Flakes Employed

for "Movie" Snowstorm

There is still hope for the salvation of the great American corn raiser.

Corn has gone into the movies in a business-like way. Heretofore the slapstick comedies may have used a few roasting-ears, with sound effects, but now corn is going into Hollywood in a determined manner and mingling with the great and near great in its most commonplace form—hominy.

"The film experts," says Farm and Fireside, "have discovered that there is nothing quite so good as corn flakes for faking a real, old fashioned blizzard. The corn flakes are specially made from hominy and are thin, white and airy. A bushel of corn flakes and an electric fan will make a snowstorm anywhere, even in California."

Devotion and Recreation

Members of the baseball team in Rome, Mo., go to Sunday school in the morning and to the baseball diamond in the afternoon. Responsibility for dividing the Sabbath day between the church and baseball is due to Eddie Lockridge, pitcher and star. He is active in church work and while not believing it is wrong to play ball on Sunday, has contended too much time is given over to the sport that day. In placing his position before his teammates Lockridge compromised with the understanding the team would go to Sunday school in the forenoon and play ball in the afternoon. —Indianapolis News.

Perfection in Samplers

The old-fashioned sampler consisted of a square of perforated canvas, the rows of perforations being equally spaced. Designs were stamped on the canvas and filled in with different colored worsteds, the stitches forming little "x's." On the finest canvas this would almost give the effect of a painting.

Negroes in British Empire

There are some negroes in England, but the number there is extremely small. The British empire has within its boundaries lands whose populations consist largely of negroes, as, for instance, Jamaica and Central and South Africa. The natives of such countries are British.

The Right Way to Redye Fine Silks

Textile makers always use special dyes for silk or wool. They know that is the best way. The makers of Diamond Dyes are the first to enable home dyers to follow this plan.

Next time you want to dye some of your more valuable articles of silk or wool, try the special Diamond Dyes in the Blue Package. They will give these materials clearer, more brilliant colors than any "all-purpose" dye. And they are just as easy to use as ordinary dyes. Like the white package Diamond Dyes, these dyes contain an abundance of the highest quality anilines. The blue package dyes silk or wool only; the white package dyes, or tints, any material. Either package; 15c, drugstores.

RECIPES OF DESTRUCTION

Here are a few good recipes for destroying your home, factory or other property:

Let your electric wiring go without repairs or inspection over a long period of time; leave piles of oil-soaked rags or other waste lying around in corners of your garage or basement; don't use fire-resistive construction in building, because it costs a little more; drop lighted matches and cigarette butts wherever you may happen to be; light your fires with gasoline.

No one, of course, is going to consciously use these "recipes" of destruction, or any of the many others of the same nature. Yet it is safe to say that millions of Americans have equal fire risks in their homes or places of business. Laziness, carelessness, ignorance—these are the best friends of the fire menace.

Every time the fire engine dashes out in their race against time it means that someone has done something or failed to do something that a little intelligent thought would have warned him against. We Americans are the most careless of people when it comes to fire, and the most wasteful.

Fire Prevention Week will shortly be here. It will be a good time to profit by the knowledge and teachings of the experts who are fighting the discouraging war against fire. Almost every great conflagration would be prevented if we spent a few more dollars or a little more time in guarding against risks. Begin now.

It appears that everything is being merged nowadays except politics and religion.

Kindness of heart doesn't always extend as far as the pocketbook.

MACHINES AND LABOR

In spite of new industries which spring up to absorb the labor which machines have displaced, the problem of unemployment appears to be becoming a serious one, particularly for men beyond middle age.

The trend of the present is toward better jobs for some and no jobs at all for others. This is creating a situation, the gravity of which is just being realized, and thoughtful persons are giving it earnest consideration.

As viewed by labor organizations, the solution of the problem lies in the direction of fewer hours per week for those employed, so that there may be enough jobs to go around. Even some industrialists agree that this is the only practical way out of the difficulty.

Realizing the seriousness of the matter, the government will obtain statistics regarding unemployment as a feature of the 1930 census, which it is hoped will supply definite information upon which an intelligent approach to the question may be made.

In a country as generally prosperous as the United States it seems that some means might be devised whereby a suitable adjustment of employment conditions would be possible. We shall not have reached a full measure of prosperity until every man who wants work can have a job.

PUBLIC NOT EXCITED

In a recent Washington news letter Wm. L. Daley of the National Editorial Association refers to the fact that current issues before Congress do not appear to agitate the public to the extent that the legislators would like. He says:

"Other topics outrank by far the questions in which Senators and Representatives have a personal interest. Legislators do not regard it as a healthy sign when they share second-rate positions in the reading public's daily bill of fare."

It is probably true that the general public takes far less interest in the doings of Congress than politicians suppose. In other words, the public does not take politicians as seriously as they take themselves. Even a red-hot Senate investigation leaves a majority of people cold, in spite of the efforts of sensational newspapers to make the most of it.

People are interested in things which directly concern them to an appreciable extent. The average citizen has enough problems of a personal nature to occupy his mind, and does not get excited over matters which only remotely affect him.

And nothing before Congress at the present moment, not even the tariff, is of sufficient importance to the average person to cause him to worry much about it.

CRIME PREVENTION

The Illinois Association for Criminal Justice believes the effort to prevent crime by sporadic crusades for law enforcement will not bear any lasting results.

The association recommends that a research and statistical organization be formed which would act both as a fact-finding body and a yardstick for measuring the efficiency of our agencies of law enforcement.

This is good advice. Too many crime reformers have gone off at half-cock, and have only added to the complexity of the problem. The country seems to be flooded with seers, each with a pet panacea for the ills of society.

As a matter of fact, our laws and administration of justice are so embroiled in red tape and technicalities that nobody knows "what it is all about." Every year thousands of new statutes go on the books; every year the criminal seems to grow more successful and safe. Our record in handling crime apparently improves in inverse ratio to our burden of laws.

We need simpler and better laws. We need less technical jurisprudence and more common sense. And we need such an organization as the Illinois Association advocates which can bring a scientific knowledge and viewpoint to the war against the underworld. Otherwise we must be as we are at present—a voice crying in the wilderness.

DEBT TO RURAL PRESS

The Department of Agriculture has just published the results of a study of costs in getting farm information to the farmers of the country. It found, among other things, that newspapers yield 15 times the results per unit of expenditure yielded by extension exhibits and other means.

Commenting on this statement, the Minneapolis Journal, a big-town daily, says:

"The medium through which this news service is circulated is, of course, the rural press of America. As the purpose of the work is the enhancement of farm income, and the improvement of rural living conditions, it may be readily seen that agriculture owes to the country newspaper a heavy debt for this one service alone."

An American expedition will seek to discover Noah's Ark. It would make a fine addition to the Shipping Board's wooden fleet.

And what, if anything has become of Big Bill Thompson?

SIX MILES A MINUTE

Hurting through space at the most terrific speed ever attained by man, Captain R. H. Orlebar of England recently set a new record of 368 miles an hour, or more than six miles a minute, flying a racing seaplane.

Other seaplane speeds made by British flyers during the present month ranged from 328 to 351 miles an hour, all of which far exceeded previous records. Orlebar's record was made in the same plane that won the famous Schneider cup a few days before by covering a 217 mile course at the average speed of 328 miles an hour. The rapid advance is seaplane speed in recent years is indicated by the fact that the winner of the Schneider cup in 1913 made only about 45 miles an hour, while in 1920 the winner's speed was but 102 miles.

It is difficult to imagine oneself dashing through the air at the rate of more than six miles a minute. If that speed could be maintained without stopping, the distance covered by the Graf Zeppelin in its recent trip around the world could be made in about 55 hours, or a little more than two and a quarter days.

The idea of such a feat may appear fantastic, but Jules Verne's idea of a trip around the world in 80 days appeared fantastic less than 60 years ago. Yet the Graf Zeppelin made it in 21 days, with less than 12 days consumed in actual flying.

However, we are not predicting that anyone will ever go around the world in two days. But who knows?

THE PENSION ROLL

Even statistics are sometimes interesting, and to those who do not happen to be familiar with Uncle Sam's pension roll the latest reports on Federal pensioners, soldiers and their widows, will be informing at least. Here are the official figures:

War of 1812—Widows, 11.
Mexican War—Widows, 725.
Indian Wars — Soldiers, 5,557; widows, 4,033.

Civil War — Soldiers, 59,066; widows, 180,323.

War with Spain—Soldiers, 179,580; widows, 28,862.

A striking item in this report is the fact that there are eleven widows of men who fought in the War of 1812 still alive and drawing pensions. The last survivor of the Mexican war died only a few days ago. Practically all living veterans of the War with Spain are now on the pension roll, their number being about three times as great as that of Civil war veterans. During July, 880 Civil war veterans died, while one was added to the pension roll.

In addition to the above, there are 14,826 soldiers of the regular Army and 3,719 widows drawing pensions. Most of these are doubtless veterans of one or more wars, but are carried on a separate list.

While few soldiers of the World war have been pensioned, owing to the provisions made for war risk insurance for them, insurance payments already reach a large sum annually. It may be that in years to come survivors of this war, too, may be made eligible for pensions.

All of which illustrates once more that besides its other horrors war is terribly expensive—before, during and after.

INVITING CAPITAL

How the attitude of legislatures toward capital is reflected in the industrial progress of their respective states is illustrated by some recent occurrences in Louisiana, as discussed in the Arkansas Gazette.

The governor of Louisiana has been active in seeking the passage of laws placing more drastic restrictions and heavier taxation on industry, it is said, with the result that capital seeking investment was inclined to shun that state.

Bankers and others who were trying to locate a $20,000,000 chemical plant at Monroe, La., formally asked the governor to forego his taxation program, pointing out the harm it was doing the state, and the governor agreed. Immediately a large oil company announced its intention to spend $9,000,000 in additions and extensions to its Baton Rouge plant, and other developments are said to be in prospect for the state.

While business and industry should bear their fair share of taxation, their harassment by burdensome legislation often defeats its purpose by "killing the goose that lays the golden egg." Capital avoids state and communities which are unfriendly or openly hostile, and seek those which invite it through according reasonable treatment and co-operation to enterprises already established.

Immigration officials at New York were chivalrous and sensible recently when they admitted a young woman without a passport. She was Miss Valerie French, aged 18, granddaughter of the late Marshal Lord French of England, who forgot her passport when she left for America to visit her fiancé, Bradley Martin of New York.

Now that Anne has learned to fly, she may feel justified in doing a little back-seat driving when Lindy is at the controls.

Anywyl, it's a relief not to have to read about the equalization fee and the debenture plan.

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.
Today, the prescription he wrote in 1885 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases;
old folks liked it for it never gripes;
children liked its pleasant taste.
All drugstores today have Dr.
Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

The defendant companies were or-the terms of fire warden appoint-that fire wardens were private citi-

OLD MR. GIANT

"I am going to give a dinner," shouted Peter Gnome, "in honor of the club, the Every-Day-Is-Nice Club."
"All our members have lived up to the rules so beautifully in acting and behaving and feeling that every day, no matter what the weather, was fun and that something could be done every single day."

"So I am going to give a dinner.
Pray all come and hear the news."
The brownies, elves, gnomes, members of the Bogey family, old Mr.
Giant and Witty Witch and the goblins all came hurrying to the spot where Peter Gnome stood.

When he saw them all he waved his high hat in the air and shouted.
"There is a little cave near here.
It would not be large enough for old Mr. Giant, but it is going to be my new home."

"There is moss inside, and there are little ferns growing about."

"There are tiny cracks in the rocks and sometimes I will be able to talk to the insects and hear why they do this and why they do that."

"So I am going to give a cave warning."

"What?" they all asked in surprise.
"When people give a party in a new house they call it a house warming—or when they have moved to a new home."

"Well, as my house is to be a cave, and as I am going to give a party in it, I think I should call it a cave
warning."

"Perfectly sensible," said Witty Witch.

"Why old Mr. Giant, what is the pulled his right ear and kissed the tip of his ear gaily.

"I was being a little selfish," said
Mr. Giant.

"You—selfish!" shouted Peter Gnome. "What in the world do you mean?"

"I will tell you," said Mr. Giant.

"Do," said Peter Gnome.

"Do," said Witty Witch. "I always approve of creatures telling what they have heard that makes them feel hurt."

"I don't believe in their keeping it to themselves as it may all be a misunderstanding that can be cleared up with a little talk."

"Peter Gnome is going to give a cave warning," said Mr. Giant, "and he said his cave was too small for me."

"It hurts my feelings for I thought my dear friend Peter Gnome loved me."

"Oh, Mr. Giant," said Peter Gnome,
"how glad I am you told me what was the matter."

"Yes, Witty Witch, you are quite right in saying things should be talked out."

"My cave where I'll sleep is very small—too small for you but all right for a bedroom for me, but my real place where I'll give the cave warning is the outside part which is like an open cave, and there are two great tables of rocks where I shall have dinner parties and where we're to have our party now."

"Oh, Mr. Giant, I wouldn't live anywhere where you couldn't come and visit me."

"There will be lots of room for you in the big cave. You can even take a nap on one of my tables any time you wish."

Old Mr. Giant was happy once more and they all went off to the party which was a huge success.

SEASONABLE HINTS

Cauliflower, so well liked as a vegetable, ranks more highly used in pickle combinations or pickled alone. The dainty little flowerets should be carefully separated, washed and drained. To avoid insects turn the head upside down in a pan of salted water—any insects hidden will come out to the surface of the water.

Pickled Cauliflower.—Break into small flowerets after removing leaves and stalks. Cook in boiling salted water for ten minutes. Rinse in cold water to which a bit of lemon juice has been added. Pack the pieces in sterilized jars, dropping a long chili pepper in each jar for added attractiveness as well as flavor. Fill the jars with hot spiced vinegar and seal while hot. Prepare the vinegar as follows:

To each quart of vinegar add one-half cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful each of whole cloves and broken stick cinnamon, blades of mace, whole allspice, celery seed, peppercorns and two small sliced onions; boil 15 minutes, strain and use at once. One large cauliflower for each quart jar and one quart of vinegar will be sufficient for three-quart jars if well packed.

Apple Butter.—This makes a delicious spread which the children will enjoy as long as it lasts. Take good flavored early apples, pare, core, and put through the meat chopper together with a lemon, orange, and two ounces of green ginger root. Measure the fruit pulp and add an equal amount of sugar and a pint of water.
Cook gently, stirring frequently until clear and thick. Can in pint jars.
Seal while hot.

Wild Grape Jelly Spiced.—This is especially well liked to serve with game in the fall and winter: Wash four quarts of grapes and put into the preserving kettle with one pint of vinegar, a bag of mixed spices, cloves, stick cinnamon, and blades of mace.
Bring to a boil, mash and cook until very soft, then pour into a jelly bag.
Boil the juice 15 minutes, add three pints of sugar and cook until thick.
Seal in glasses.

Wild grape jam is delicious to serve with meats. Use the half ripe grapes (remove seeds) and add three-quarters of their weight in sugar. Place in a kettle with two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and orange or lemon juice to start the steam. Bring slowly to the boiling point and cook a half-hour after boiling commences.

Apple Relish.

Take eight firm tart apples, four medium-sized onions, one cupful of raisins and one sweet red pepper. Peel and chop the apples as well as the raisins and other vegetables, mix thoroughly. Boil one quart of vinegar, two and one-half cupfuls of brown sugar, three teaspoon-fuls of salt, four tablespoonfuls of whole mixed spices tied in a muslin bag. When the sirup is formed stir in the other ingredients and cook for one hour slowly. The sauce will be very thick when finished. Seal hot.

Ripe Cucumber Pickles.—Many prefer these to the watermelon pickles, which are such favorite sweet pickles.
Pare ripe cucumbers and cut into long strips, removing the seeds. Cover with a quart of water in which three tablespoonfuls of salt have been dissolved, adding more water and salt to cover the cucumbers. Let stand several hours then drain and place in cold water. Make a sirup of one and one-half pints of vinegar, one pound of granulated sugar, one-half ounce each of stick cinnamon and whole cloves. Boil five minutes. Drop in the cucumber and cook until it is transparent. Tuck in small pieces of red pepper here and there and place in jars. Boil down the sirup and pour over boiling hot; seal at once.

Horseradish Relish.—Take three large grated roots of horseradish, add one tablespoonful of turmeric, a tablespoonful of celery seed, two tablespoonfuls of mustard, one-half cupful of sugar and enough boiling vinegar to make a pint and a half. Mix well and bottle. Serve after standing two weeks. This is a sauce which goes well with cold meats and chops. It is bitingly appetizing.

Chocolate Malted Milk.—Melt two squares of bitter chocolate, add four tablespoonfuls of malted milk dissolved and mixed with a little cold water then brought to a boil, add a quart of scalding hot milk, a pinch of salt and as much sugar as is needed to sweeten. Serve hot or chilled, with ice.

CHECKMATE

"Yes, indeed," was the reply.

STATE'S TAXABLE WEALTH NEAR TEN BILLION DOLLARS

California's taxable wealth is almost $10,000,000,000. This was revealed last Monday by an analysis of county auditors' reports made by the State Board of Equalization.

From these reports the equalization board finds that the total assessed value of all taxable property in the state is $9,890,992,962, making an increase of 21.73 per cent over the corresponding figure of $8,125,497,579 for 1928. In an analysis of these figures the board points out that this apparent gain can not be regarded as a true measure of the increase in the wealth of the state, because of the change in the basis for taxation of solvent credits and other intangibles.

Under a constitutional amendment adopted last November and an act of the 1929 legislature, this type of property is now required to be placed upon the county tax rolls at its actual value, subject, however, to the greatly reduced rates on each $100 or 10 cents for solvent creditors and 20 cents for stocks and bonds of foreign corporations. In 1928 this type of property, most of which is declared in cities, was subject to a tax rate of approximately $4 per hundred dollars of assessed valuation, according to the findings of the equalization board.

Thus it appears that the expansion of the tax rolls this year is largely synthetic, due to the increase in the valuation of solvent credits and securities on account of the different method employed for their taxation. The total increase of the 1929 assessment rolls over those of 1928 is $1,764,495,383, and of this $1,421,763,313 is the additional value ascribed to solvent credits and other intangibles, so that this value is accountable for 80.58 per cent of the total increase of 21.73 per cent.

At the rate of 10 cents per hundred dollars, the tax accruing from solvent credits will be $411,890.60, while the additional tax calculated at the 20 cent rate on the balance of the intangibles taxable under the new law will bring the total yield from this source up to $2,622,548.45. This will be considerably less than the 1928 tax from the same sources, according to the board, when approximately $3,818,000 was collected by local taxing units on an assessed valuation of $95,450,000. Thus, although the innovation has added to the total amount of wealth reflected on the tax rolls of the state, it has actually resulted in a decrease of the tax yield of approximately $1,250,000.

Real property values in rural districts increased to a much greater extent than those for cities, as it appears that the value of real estate outside municipalities increased 4.24 per cent over last year, and improvements 12.85 per cent, while city values for real estate increased 5.03 per cent, but improvement values decreased 19.56 per cent. This year the total assessment outside municipalities amounted to $1,346,739,486 for real estate and $407,147,818 for improvements; inside municipalities the corresponding valuations were $2,624,727,007 for real estate and $1,278,491,280 for improvements.

Country districts continue to show a decrease in their personal property assessments and for the first time in many years this is also true of the same class of properties in cities. A comparison of the 1929 with those of 1928 for values of personal property, exclusive of money, securities and solvent credits, indicates that the total of $264,405,635 outside municipalities marks a decrease of 2.14 per cent, while the figure of $659,870,550 for cities marks the slight decrease of 0.05 per cent.

Los Angeles with an increase of $867,895,139, or 23.75 per cent in the total figure of $4,522,895,844, leads all counties in the greatest net gain, while San Francisco is second with an increase of $529,252,758, or 50.13 per cent, with a total valuation of $1,585,120,456. San Diego shows the greatest percentage of increase.

TRANS-AMERICA PLANS FURTHER EXPANSION

Trans-America Corporation will issue 2,000,000 new shares of stock, representing more than $115,000,000 additional working capital, it was announced a few days ago by A. P. Giannini, president of the gigantic holding company, who outlined plans that contemplate increasing the number of stockholders to 500,000, and paying the way to further extension in the organization's world-wide development.

One million shares of the new issue will be offered to stockholders of record, November 5, at $55, on the basis of one share for each twenty-five owned, while the remaining one million shares will be made immediately available for non-stockholders at the market price, but in any event, not less than $60. Special installment terms will be given to those who purchase not more than twenty-five shares of stock with an initial cash payment and subsequent monthly installment of $5 per share per month for a period of ten months. The installment privilege will be extended to old stockholders, wishing to exercise their rights, as well as to new purchasers.

Trans-America Corporation controls or effectively controls, companies whose assets aggregate two and one-half billion dollars.

THRILLS PROMISED BY DALY CITY THEATRE

There are two big feature attractions on the Saturday line-up at the Daly City Theatre, headed by that incomparable team of fun favorites, Dane and Arthur, in "China Bound," a laughing thrill story. James Oliver Curwood's "Yellow Back," with Tom Moore, is the second feature. There will be a kiddie's matinee at 2 p. m., with the usual night performances starting at 7.

For Sunday, "Snooky" White has added a lot of new faces to his comedy company and promises a new departure in comedy musical playlets. On the screen Charles Morton, Earle Foxe and Mary Astor will cavort in "New Year's Eve," a most delightful romance that turns to a thrill and action story.

Monday night is Silvernite, and Aileen Pringle, Lew Cody and Bobby Armstrong will be seen in that hurricane laugh special called "The Baby Cyclone." Don't miss it. It is a laugh treat.

The Daly City Theatre program for the month of October will be out Monday, and there will be found many surprises in the bookings of next month's service of features, which promises to be the best balanced month of attractions yet offered at this popular playhouse.

"IN THE HEADLINES" OPENS AT THE EMBASSY THEATRE

Heralded as the best talking picture of the life of a newspaper reporter, "In the Headlines" has opened for an engagement at the Embassy Theatre, San Francisco. An extremely interesting feature of this picture is that Grant Withers, who has been carrying newspaper men's characters upon several occasions, is the reporter of the story.

Innumerable cases are on record in which reporters on large city daily papers have brought desperate criminals to bay and lighted the veil of mystery that surrounded the crime. One case occurred in San Francisco only a few years ago that attracted nation wide interest.

The story was written by James Atherton Starr, one of the best known newspapermen of the west, and the picture is a faithful reproduction of the original. It is a stirring tale in which there is plenty of mystery, much drama and romance of heart interest and touches of comedy.

"SAY IT WITH SONGS" NOW AT MARION DAVIES THEATRE

So that all those who wish to see and hear Al Jolson in "Say It With Songs" may do so, that singing and talking production has been moved from the Embassy to the Marion Davies Theatre, San Francisco, where it is now on a run.

In this picture Jolson sings more new numbers than ever before. He appears as a radio entertainer and song writer and this injects an atmosphere of realism in the picture, because the star is experienced in both departments and it is as if one were viewing a portion of his life.

There is a large quantity of fun in "Say It With Songs." Many laughs are given during the early part of the picture, when Jolson jokes and kids some of the members of the cast.

Little Davey Lee is again the hero of the story, and Jolson sings this little boy the theme of the play, "Little Pal." Marion Davies is the star leading woman.

Mrs. Margaret Elwell of Kansas City got out a hat she had not worn for several weeks and found it contained a wasp's nest.

Helen Kershaw, 14, was the only passenger in an airplane flying between England and Cologne, Germany, recently.

Mary Agnes Cunningham, 30-month-old farm baby of near Serana, Ill., won a contest in which she was declared to be 99.9 per cent perfect. The fraction was deducted from her score because of one slightly irregular tooth.

J. C. Connell, 14, of Clanton, Ala., saved the life of Wallace Renfro, 9, who had been bitten by a rattlesnake, through employing first aid measures learned as a Boy Scout.
